Your source for healthy aging information you can trust

Let's look at the role that participating in social activities, and exercising the brain through cognitive engagement and brain activities plays in promoting brain health and reducing your risk of developing dementia.

Social Activity

Connecting with other people through social activities and community programs can keep your brain active and help you feel less isolated and more engaged with the world around you. In addition, being socially engaged has been associated with better brain function in some studies. Studies have shown that low social participation, less frequent social contact, and feelings of loneliness are all associated with increased risk of developing dementia.

Social activity is also important in maintaining healthy mental health. Social interactions lower stress levels, decrease depression and anxiety, and improve overall life satisfaction. People who also engage in meaningful activities with others tend to live longer, improve their mood and promote a sense of purpose. Studies show that these activities help maintain a person's well-being and may improve their cognitive function.

There are many programs to help people stay socially active as they age in many communities. Talk to your doctor, social worker, or community case manager to find out about how you can stay social. If you don't know where to start, you can also call 211 or consult 211.ca to learn about offerings in your area; or contact your local community centre, or YMCA to learn about their programs to help you stay social.

Cognitive Activity

When you keep your brain active with exercises or other tasks, you help build and strengthen connections between brain cells. You might even grow new brain cells. This has positive impacts on cognitive functioning, such as thinking and learning and reducing your risk of cognitive decline.

Brain training activities are an effective way to challenge your brain and increase your cognitive functioning. These activities include reading, video games, crosswords, Sudoku puzzles, playing a musical instrument, listening to the radio, and participating in leisure activities, such as sports, social interaction and hobbies. Research has shown that activities that incorporate both cognitive and physical activities provide the most benefit with respect to promoting brain health.

Try to find activities with some degree of 'desirable difficulty': these are activities that are just the right amount of challenging. They are activating your brain in new and exciting ways such that you are learning new things; but they aren't so challenging as to be frustrating. There is also some emerging evidence that more passive types of activities – like watching tv – are less stimulating than more active tasks, like using a computer (where you have to input something). Activities don't have to be fancy brain- training games either; things like reading, puzzles, or trying to learn a new language can all stimulate the brain.

Bottom Line

Stay curious, stimulate your brain, and stay social.

** The Trefry Centre offers programs that can help you stay active, connected and engaged in your community or in your own home. Perfect for those who live alone.

Strawberry Icebox Cake

Ingredients:

1 (8-oz.) package cream cheese, room temperature
1 cup powdered sugar
3 cup heavy cream, divided
1 Tbsp. vanilla bean paste or extract
1 Tbsp. lemon zest
20 graham cracker sheets
1 1/2 lb. strawberries, sliced about 1/4-inch thick (about 4 1/2 cups)
1/2 c. sliced almonds (optional)

Directions:

In the bowl of a stand mixer fitted with the beater attachment, beat the cream cheese until smooth. Add the powdered sugar, beating until smooth.

Scrape down the sides of the bowl. Add 1 cup of heavy cream and beat at low speed until smooth. Add the remaining 2 cups of cream and beat at medium to medium-high speed until soft peaks form, increasing the speed as the mixture begins to thicken. Fold in the vanilla and lemon zest.

Spoon 1/4 cup of the cream mixture into the bottom of a 9-by-9-inch pan or baking dish, spreading into a thin, even layer.

Top with the graham crackers in a single, even layer, breaking them as needed to fit. Spread about 1 1/2 cups of the cream mixture over the graham crackers, using a spoon or offset spatula to smooth into an even layer. Top the cream mixture with an even layer of strawberries, about 1 1/2 cups. Sprinkle evenly with 1/4 cup of almonds, if using.

Repeat once more, then top with a final layer of graham crackers, cream mixture, and berries.

Cover with plastic wrap and refrigerate at least 4 hours or up to overnight.

Tip: The almonds in the recipe add a lovely crunch, but feel free to leave them out if you prefer softer layers.
